Immigrants from the Russian Empire, 1898-1922 is a database hosted by the Library and Archives Canada (LAC) with 11,400 reference to passport and identity papers created by the Imperial Russian Consular offices located in Montréal, Vancouver and Halifax. It is also known as the Likacheff-Ragosine-Mathers (LI-RA-MA) collection, for the surnames of the last three consuls who kept the records. These records had been held by the National Archives (NARA) in Washington D.C. and were loaned to LAC for microfilm and classification in the 1990s. NARA later sent the originals to the Soviet Union. LAC has now digitized these records and made them available online.

The International Tracing Service (ITS) is the world's most comprehensive archive on the victims of Nazi persecution. It preserves over 30 million documents, including records of concentration camps, ghettos, forced labor, displaced persons, and other information on the consequences of Nazi crimes. The ITS Digital Collections Online platform now offers access to over 2 million of these records online, as part of an ongoing effort to expand open access to these sources.
